WATER -Of all inorganic substances; acting in their own proper nature, and with-out assistance or combination, water is the most wonderful. If we think of it as the source of all the changefulness and beauty which we have seen in the clouds; then as the instrument by which the earth we have contemplated was modeled into symmetry, and its crags chiseled into grace; then as, in the form of snow, it robes the mountains it which we could not have conceived if we had not seen; then as it exists in the foam of the torrent, in the iris which spans, in the morning mist which rises from it, in the deep crystalline pools which mirror its banging shore, in the broad lake and glancing river; finally, in that which to all human minds is the best emblem of unwearied, unconquerable power, the wild, various, fantastic, tameless unity of the sea-what shall we compare to this mighty, this universal element, for glory and for beauty? or how shall we follow its eternal changefulness of feeling? It is like trying to paint a soul .- Ruskin.

How To Win Love -If you wish to be a woman's lover, her hero, her ideal, her delight, her utter rest and ultimatum, you must attune your soul to fine issues-you must bring out the angel in you, and keep the brute under. It is not that you shall stop making shoes, and begin to write. No. sir. You may make shoes, you may run the huntsman's horn, and burl the base ball, follow the plow, smite the anvil; your face might be brown, your veins knotted, your hands grimmed, and yet you may be a bero. And, on the other hand, you may write verses and be a clown. It is not necessary to feed on ambrosia in order to become divine; nor shall none be accursed, though he drink of the nine-fold Styx -The Israelites ate angel's food in the wilderness, and remained stiff necked and uncircumcised in hearts and ears. The white water lily feeds on slime, and unfolds a heavenly glory. Come as the June morning comes. It has not picked its way daintily, passing only among the roses. It has blown through the fields and the barn-yards and all the common places of the land. It has shrunk from nothing. Its purity has breasted and overborne all things, and so harmonized all that it sweeps around your forehead and sinks into your heart, as soft and sweet as the fragrancy of Paradise. So come you, rough from the world's rough work, with all out-door airs blowing around you, but with a fine laward grace, so strong so sweet, so salubrious that it meets and masters all things, blending overy faintest and foulest odor of earthliness into the grateful incense of a pure and lofty life: Miss Dorge.

Joe Mayweed's Courtship.

The funny columns of the English papers derive more of their stuffs for smiles from journals in the country, than from any other source. We find in one of them this ludicrous anecdote of a certain bewitched

About half past seven o'clock on Sunday night a human leg, enveloped in blue clothes might liave been seen entering old Cheph as Barbary's kitchen window. The leg was followed by the entire body of a Yankee, attired in his Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes. It was in short, Joe Mayweed, who thus burglariously won his way in the old dea-con's kitchen. Wonder how much the old descon made by ordering me not to darken his door agin, solilequized the young gentlemen. Promised him I wouldn't, but didn't say any thing about windows. Windows are as good as doors if there ain't no nails to tare trousers onto. Wonder if Sally will come down. The critter promised me. I'm afraid to move about here, I might break my shins over somthin or another and awake the old folks. Cold enough to freeze a

The beauteous maid descended with a smile, a tallow candle and a box of lucifer

After receiving a rapturous greeting, she made a rousing fire in the cooking stove, and the happy young people sat down to enjoy the sweet interchange of hopes and VOWS.

But the course of true love ran not a bit moother in Barbary's kitchen than elsewhere, and Joe was just making up his mind to treat himself to a kiss, when he was startled by the voice of the deacon, her father, shouting from the door of his cham-

Sall! what are you getting up in the middle of the night for? Tell him it's morning, whispered Joe

I can't tell him a fib, said Sally, I'll make it truth, then, said Joe. And running to the huge old fashioned clock that stood in the corner, he put the hands at five. Look at the clock and tell me whot time it is, cried the old gentleman.

It's five by the clock, said Sally, and corrotorating her words the clock struck five. The lovers sat down again and resumed has made with that transcendent light their conversation. Suddenly the stairs be gan to creak.

Good gracious! it's father. The deacon, by thunder! exclaimed Joe. Hide me, Sally. Where can I hide you? exclaimed the distracted girl. O, I know, said he, I'll squeeze into the clock case. And without a word he concealed himself in the case and closed the door. The deacon was dressed, and seating himself by the stove, pulled out his pipe, lighted it, and began deliberately to smoke. Five o'clock, he? said he. Well, I shall have time to smoke three or four pipes, and then I'll go and feed the critters. Hadn't you better go and feed the critters first? suggested Silly. . No, smokin' clears my head and wakes me up, replied the deacon, who seemed not a whit disposed to hurry up the enjoyment of his pipe. Bur-r-r-r whiz! ding! ding! ding! went the clock. Tormented lighting, cried the deacon, starting up, and dropping his pipe on the stove, what'n earth's that! It's only the clock striking five, replied Sally, tremulously.

Power of creation! cried the deacon .-Strikin five! It's struck more than a hundred already.

Deacon Barbary, cried the deacon's wife, who had hastily robed herself, and now came plunging down stairs in the wildest state of alarm, what in the universe is the matter with the clock! Goodness only knows, replied the old man, It's a hundred years in the family, and I never knew it to carry on so afore. Whiz! ding! went the clock again.

I'll burst itself! cried the old lady, shedding a floud of tears, and there won't be nothing left of it.

It's bewitched! cried the deacon, who contained a leaven of old New England superstition in his nature. Anyhow, said he after a pause, advancing resolutely toward the clock, I'll see what's going on in it. Oh, don't cried his daughter, seizing one of his coat tails, while his wife caught the
